I heartily agree with Mary Ingelsby's letter to the editor dated Dec. 17.

I went to Dr. Ammar Anbari last year suffering from extreme hip pain with very limited movement. I was a 35-year-old wife and mother with two young children that I was struggling to keep up with. Dr. Anbari was caring and kind and assured me he could help.

He kept his promise because I was able to enjoy many activities this summer with my family that I had missed out on for so long. Dr. Anbari is a rare breed of doctor possessing not only talent, but a wonderful bedside manner to boot. His smile is contagious, even in post-op.

My oldest daughter puts it so perfectly: Dr. Anbari fixed my mommy's hip, and he's a nice man too.
